What are cookies

Cookies are small text files that are saved on the hard drive of the device you use to visit our websites. For consistency, comparable technologies such as pixels, web beacons, etc., are referred to with the term 'cookies'.

In order to safeguard your privacy as much as possible, you can specify which type of cookies we are allowed to place. You can choose between preferences, statistics and marketing cookies. The following is a short explanation of the different categories of cookies we place, including their purpose. Details about all cookies offered are given on the cookie banner on our website.

Necessary cookies

Necessary cookies help to make a website more usable by enabling basic functions such as page navigation and access to secure areas of the website. Without these cookies, the website cannot function properly and therefore are always included in the default selection.

Preferences cookies

Preference cookies allow a website to remember information that affects the behaviour and design of the website, such as your preferred language or the region where you live.

Statistics cookies

Statistic cookies help website owners understand how visitors use their website by collecting and reporting data anonymously. They allow us to see, among other things, how often pages are visited and how long sessions last on average.

Marketing cookies

Marketing cookies are used to track visitors across websites. The intention is to display ads that are relevant and engaging for the individual user and thereby more valuable for publishers and third party advertisers. Cookies placed by Google and Microsoft fall under this category.
